Gary:

I will take some time later to thoroughly read and possibly respond to your attached letter, but I want to be clear that at no time, to this point, have I attacked Ms. Voycheske's character. Your letter appears to suggest that I should. I am, however, clearly and unapologetically attacking your character. Your need to send me this random treatise, when you have been "too busy" to conduct the July 30 and 31 scheduled 30(b)(6) depositions necessary to complete discovery in a timely manner, demonstrates to me that I am on the right track.

I never see this much work from you, Gary. I am assuming I got this result due to the fact that the nature of the letter to which you are referring, is your exposure of Saul Ewing and your client to an entirely new law suit through the use of the now permanent Voycheske declarations. Just think how differently things may have been for you at this point, if you had put this much thought and work into your client's case in the first place.

Have a nice weekend.

-Shawn
